Information concerning copyright of a periodical manufactured in the United States of America

For purposes of registration the term "periodical" includes works published at regular intervals of less than a year under the same general title, such as newspapers, magazines, reviews, proceedings of societies, serial publications, and generally periodic works which would be registered as second-class matter at the Post Office. Claims to copyright in issues of serial publications which are not published at regular intervals of less than a year under the same general title should be registered in Class A.

Copyright may be secured in each issue of a periodical by publication of each issue with a notice of copyright, on the title page, the first page of text, or under the title heading, consisting of the word "Copyright," the abbreviation "Copr.," or the symbol © accompanied by the name of the copyright owner and the year date of publication. Example: © John Doe 1955.

The use of the symbol © with the name of the copyright owner and the year date may result in securing copyright in some countries outside the United States under the provisions of the Universal Copyright Convention, which protection might not be secured by use of either of the alternative forms of notice.

Publication without notice or with an inadequate notice results in the loss of the right to secure copyright, which, once lost, cannot be regained.

The date of publication is defined as "... the earliest date when copies of the first authorized edition were placed on sale, sold, or publicly distributed . . ."

Promptly after publication with notice of copyright, two complete copies of each issue should be sent to the Register of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington 25, D. C. These may be mailed free of charge if delivered to the postmaster with such request. There should also be sent with each issue an application on Form B and the registration fee of $4, which will require letter postage.

The first term of copyright is 28 years and is computed, in the case of a periodical, from the date of publication. In the twenty-eighth year an application may be filed to renew the claim to copyright for a second term of 28 years.

A deposit account may be established in the Copyright Office by remitting a sum of money sufficient to cover the registration fees for 1 year, and from this account will be deducted the fee of $4 for each registration.
